

A Note from the Interim Editor

I WOULD LIKE TO TAKE THIS OPPORTUNITY TO REMIND readers of the Quarterly of two changes first announced in the last issue. We will publish responses from readers to articles that have appeared on our pages. Such letters may be up to 1,500 words in length and should focus on broad, substantive matters. To preserve an element of timeliness, we must restrict these responses to articles that have appeared within the prior three months. We will also begin to publish a limited number of book-review essays. Invited as well as unsolicited, these essays of between 3,000 and 5,000 words will provide authors with an opportunity to use the occasion of the publication of a book, or books, to raise broad questions of a substantive, disciplinary, or methodological kind.
